Stroll elegant cobbled streets on your way to buy fresh fruit at an outdoor market. Take in a performance of music or theater. Dine with locals in restaurants that no tourist could hope to stumble upon. Our AHI Travel team will be available to help you in any way, but the journey is yours to mold.

Renaissance masterpiece by Raphael, Prado Museum | Royal Palace | Alcala Gate
Madrid

Even before King Felipe II capriciously designated Madrid as Spain’s capital in 1561, the dynamic city was an integration point for the country’s heterogeneous regions. Here you’ll find stirring flamenco performances equal to those of Seville and seafood as fresh as you’d enjoy in Vigo. Madrid presents a dichotomous mix: modern urban sophistication surrounds an old heart sustained by fiercely held traditions. Within the mountain capital are feasts of ethnic cuisine, winding medieval alley, tapas bars, grand museums and an incomparable nightlife celebrated by a cosmopolitan, open-minded people: an ideal base for your international living experience.

Your apartahotel is steps away from the Royal Palace. Clearly inspired by King Felipe V’s childhood at Versailles, the 18th-century Bourbon monument of granite and white stone stands amid acres of manicured gardens. The palace’s 2,800 lavishly decorated chambers are filled with royal portraits, sumptuous furniture and tapestries.

Madrid’s centuries-old cultural and artistic heritage thrives within its splendid architecture, breadth of monuments and more than 60 museums, as well as the community’s UNESCO World Heritage sites, two of which are included on your itinerary. The city holds three-quarters of Velázquez’s known paintings and a generous number of works by Goya. You’ll visit the world-famous Prado Museum with 5,000 pieces on permanent display and explore Spain’s burgeoning contemporary art scene with a trip to the Reina Sofía National Art Center. The center’s showpiece is Picasso’s enormous Guernica surrounded by some of his early sketches. Beyond museum walls, Madrid boasts extensive green spaces. Hike among the foothills of Sierra de Guadarrama and join madrileños for peaceful strolls along Retiro Park’s leafy paths. Drink wine, nibble tapas and savor your days with a people who have mastered the art of the good life.

Castilla y León

Castilla y León is Spain’s largest region, stretching from Portugal in the west to Aragón and La Rioja in the east, and from Madrid in the south to Cantabria and Basque Country in the north. Rings with mountains on three sides, Castilla covers 36,000 square miles, more than half of which is dedicated to agriculture. With 2.5 million residents, Castilla has a fifth of Spain’s land area but only five percent of the population. Thanks to the region’s rich medieval history, Castilla is home to majestic stone castles, cathedrals, monasteries and fortified towns, as well as several UNESCO World Heritage sites.

Comunidad de Madrid

Located in the center of the Iberian peninsula, the Comunidad de Madrid is one of Spain’s 17 autonomous communities. Although Spain was united under a crown in the 16th century, Madrid’s territory historically served as a confluence for differing political, historical and cultural traditions. As Spain transitioned towards democracy in the 20th century, instead of complete national amalgamation, the Spanish Constitution of 1978 guaranteed political and administrative independence to the unified nation’s diverse nationalities and regions. Encircled by Castilla-La Mancha and Castilla y León, the Comunidad de Madrid’s richly varied province encompasses the capital city as well as its surrounding river valleys, open plains and pine-blanketed sierras.

UNESCO

The Old City of Salamanca, the Old Town of Ávila, the Old Town of Segovia, Historic City of Toledo, El Escorial Monastery, University and Historic Precinct of Alcalá de Henares are UNESCO World Heritage sites featured on this program.

Try your hand at a variety of dishes as you create lasting memories and foster your passion for Spanish cooking.

(Extra Credit option is available at an additional cost.)

SPANISH MEALTIME

Time seems to run differently in Spain. The day begins with breakfast: a small meal of sweet rolls, jam or mild cheese and café con leche, coffee with milk. Late morning tapas sate the appetite until 2 p.m., when Spaniards sit down to the largest meal of the day, la comida, which usually consists of multiple courses and is accompanied by sherry, wine or beer. This hearty meal is followed by a siesta. Businesses close shop for this two- to three-hour break each day, a tradition that dates back to early regional agriculture and the need for a midday break from the hot Spanish sun.

The afternoon begins with a return to work at 5 p.m., but it doesn’t last long, as evening begins at 8 p.m., when thoughts turn to wine and other refreshing beverages. La cena, dinner, is typically served after 9 p.m. and is smaller and simpler than la comida. Spaniards typically go to bed around midnight, earning them the reputation of Europe’s night owls. After a few days in Madrid, you’ll find yourself operating on unhurried Spanish time — and liking it.
THE CASTILIAN PANTRY

A country renowned for its cuisine, Spain boasts rich, well-seasoned fare and distinctly Mediterranean ingredients. A typical Spanish pantry includes extra virgin olive oil, red or white wine vinegar, olives, rice, beans, lentils, saffron, smoked paprika, capers and artichoke hearts. In most of Spain, meat is enjoyed in moderation; dry cured Serrano ham, lamb, chorizo sausage and chicken are used in small amounts to add flavor and texture to dishes such as paella, a Valencian rice dish. Omelets are also popular, and seafood is customary along the coast. Bread is served with every meal, often with oil for dipping, and is also a common snack served with cheese.

Castilian-Leonese cuisine is distinguished by hearty stews and centerpiece roasted meats such as carne asada and suckling pig. The stews are made of three basic ingredients: meat, pulses (beans, lentils or chickpeas, grown locally) and vegetables. Nuts or bread are added to thicken the stew and enrich the flavor. The Castilian region is the birthplace of the Spanish national dish, a hearty stew called cocido. The region also produces Spain’s best-known cheese, Manchego. Castilian desserts often feature candied almonds and marzipan.

The most famous characteristic of Spanish cuisine is tapas, small appetizers served hot and cold to accompany sherry, wine or beer. While innumerable interpretations of classic small plates can be found all over Spain, some restaurants and bars are known for a particular type of tapas. Many Spaniards like to make several stops to enjoy their favorites.

In addition to offering you the chance to enjoy four full weeks of authentic Spanish food, this program includes a special cooking demonstration and tasting. Optional cooking classes are available at an additional cost. What better souvenir from your time in Spain than a repertoire of delicious Spanish recipes?

THE CASTILIAN WINE CELLAR

A Spanish meal isn’t complete without wine! The Castilla region claims some 400 wineries and 10 Denomination of Origin (DO) wines: Ribera del Duero, Cigales, Rueda, Toro, Bierzo, Arlanza, Arribes, Tierras de León, Valles de Benacente and Tierra del vino de Zamora. Many of the region’s vineyards lie along the Duero River, which provides much-needed moisture in an otherwise arid climate. The dry, hot summers are followed by long, cold winters, both of which influence the flavor of the grapes and the character of the wine. Both red and white wines are produced in Castilla, along with sparkling wine; licoroso, wine with a particularly high alcoholic content; and aguardiente, a variety of liqueur.

Another Spanish beverage that has achieved worldwide repute is sangria, a refreshing summer punch that combines wine with fruit, seltzer and sugar. Spain is also the birthplace of sherry, wine fortified with brandy. To this day, all wine labeled as “sherry” in Europe must come from the Sherry Triangle in the Cádiz region of Spain. For a non-alcoholic treat, try a homemade horchata de chufa, a sweet, milky drink made from ground tiger nuts.

EL ESCORIAL

El Escorial rises from the foothills of Sierra de Guadarrama. Felipe II was a deeply religious man, preferring to retreat from his monarchical duties surrounded by monks as opposed to courtiers. He designed El Escorial as a monastery for the Order of Jeronimo monks, as well as his royal residence. The UNESCO World Heritage site’s austerity and lack of ornamentation established a new architectural style in Spain. Constructed of gray granite, the massive 16th-century structure took more than 20 years to complete and is a coalescence of Renaissance architecture, sculpture and painting. Marble sarcophagi in the octagonal Royal Pantheon hold the remains of many Spanish monarchs. Felipe II loved gardens, and the building’s surrounding grounds display elaborate hedge designs.

SALAMANCA AND ÁVILA

Located about 50 miles from the Portuguese border, Salamanca is world-renowned for being home to one of the oldest western universities in the world. Each year more than 25,000 students descend upon Salamanca to study. Salamanca’s historic Old Town, a UNESCO World Heritage site, is known for its beautiful sandstone architecture and grand Plaza Mayor, a picturesque baroque square lined with galleries and arcades.

The beautiful, fortified town of Ávila was founded as a bulwark against Moorish invasion into Spanish territory. An impressively intact 11th-century Romanesque wall encloses Ávila’s Old Town, a UNESCO World Heritage site. Within the wall lies a wealth of medieval buildings built by the nobles who moved there after the town came under permanent Christian control in the 11th century. In the 16th century, Ávila served as the birthplace and home of Saint Teresa, a prominent Catholic mystic and theologian.

During your full-day excursion, lunch will be served at one of Ávila’s historic hotels.

TOLEDO

Long the spiritual capital of Spain, Toledo overlooks the beautiful Tagus River. Its picturesque setting appears today just as it did when El Greco painted it. A storehouse of more than two millennia of history, this UNESCO World Heritage site bears testimony to its paradoxical period of religious tolerance, when Islam, Christianity and Judaism coexisted in harmony during the late Middle Ages. Their syncretism shaped the city’s sciences, arts and architecture and left behind an intriguing mix of mosques, synagogues and churches. The city’s most impressive monument is Toledo Cathedral, one of the world’s largest cathedrals. Within you’ll find the baroque altarpiece Transparente designed by Narciso Tomé. Visit historic Tránsito and Santa María la Blanca Synagogues where the Moorish influence is displayed among horseshoe arches, arabesques and glazed tiles.

SEGOVIA AND LA GRANJA DE SAN ILDEFONSO

A colossal Roman aqueduct dominates the ancient, quiet town of Segovia. Built around A.D. 50 to tap into the waters of the Río Acebeda 11 miles away, the remarkably well-preserved monument is a feat of civil engineering and helped earn the city designation as a UNESCO World Heritage site. The aqueduct still conveys water to the upper town, ending at the Alcázar, a castle on a rocky crag that dates from the 11th century. Favorered by monarchs of the Kingdom of Castilla, the Alcázar was a key defensive fortress in the Middle Ages. The town also boasts a massive, 16th-century Gothic cathedral on its enchanting Plaza Mayor.

Located in the hills near Segovia is the 18th-century Royal Palace of la Granja de San Ildefonso. Built by Felipe V, the palace was once the summer residence of the Kings of Spain and is known for its extensive gardens decorated with ornate fountains.

During your full-day excursion, you will enjoy lunch in a historic restaurant serving a traditional local favorite: suckling pig.

ALCALÁ DE HENARES

Renowned as the birthplace of Miguel de Cervantes, Alcalá de Henares was the world’s first planned university city. Within its 400-year-old walls, the city’s infamous white storks look down from majestic Renaissance towers. Founded in 1508 by Cardinal Jiménez de Cisneros, this UNESCO World Heritage site has been remarkably preserved, its cobbled streets winding past historic buildings, convents and churches. Alcalá University became one of the foremost places of learning in 16th-century Europe, rivaling Salamanca. Many of its cloisters, courtyards and buildings are beautiful examples of the intricate Renaissance-Plateresque style. Stroll the corridors once walked by Quevedo, Lope de Vega and Calderón de la Barca, and visit the marble tomb of Cisneros located within the university’s oldest building, the Chapel of San Ildefonso.
CASTILIAN DIALECT

The term castellano, Castilian Spanish, refers to the Latin-based language spoken in northern and central Spain. Originally the local dialect of Cantabria in north central Spain, Castilian spread through the region and became the official language of King Alfonso X’s government in the 13th century. This laid the foundation for Castilian to become the basis of standard Spanish.

Other Spanish dialects are spoken throughout the country and the world; in fact, thanks to Spain’s long history of exploration and conquest, Spanish is second only to Chinese as the most commonly spoken language in the world. The Castilian region has retained its status as the home of the purest form of Spanish, making it the perfect place to study this practical language.

SPANISH TUNA MUSIC

During your farewell reception, you will be treated to a performance by a traditional Spanish music group called a tuna. The tuna dates from the Middle Ages, when ensembles of university students would display their musical talents in return for food or money to pay for their studies. More than 700 years later, students throughout Spain and the world continue the tradition. Membership in a tuna is an honor guarded by a set of initiation rites, similar to U.S. fraternities. The tuna usually includes two to six charismatic students, tunos, who meander through streets, festivals, parties and restaurants, singing traditional Spanish music as well as popular and folk songs, and accompanying themselves on guitar, tambourine, lute and bandurria. The tunos don traditional Iberian gear, including stockings, baggy pants, a white collared shirt, a tight doublet, a cloak and a sash called a beca, colored to reflect the student’s course of study.
